JP-A-61-203290 and JP-A-62-68294 disclose a robot, used in a clean room, wherein a driving portion which becomes a dust generating portion is covered with a cover and air within the cover is sucked to prevent dust, particles, etc. from diffusing out of the cover.

JP-A-62-98740 discloses a dust preventing system for a rotary mechanism wherein a processing chamber has an N2 introduction pipe and a driving source is disposed in the processing chamber with the driving source being covered by a housing. By making the pressure in the processing chamber higher than the outside pressure, dust is exhausted to the outside through an exhaust pipe communicating with the inside of the housing and the outside of the processing chamber.
